General Notes: Husband - George Pearsall⁸

- 1) George remained connected with Christ's First Presbyterian Church, but did not seem to have had any part in its management.
- 2) George Pearsall resided at Herrick, Hempstead, L. I., N. Y., near what is now (1928) Searington.

Research Notes: Child - George Pearsall Jr [529]¹⁰

1) Resided at Herricks, Hempstead, L.I., N.Y.

2) George Pearsall, Jr. survived his father but a few short years. He lived on Watermelon Hill....when George, Jr., decided to erect a home on the summit of Watermelon Hill, the site was well chosen and shows that George had a sense for the artistic beauties of nature as from here he could overlook the pond and surrounding country, and on across the plains to the wooded ridges to the north where stood the noble hardwood trees of the virgin forest, on the edge of which one could see the home of Daniel Pearsall, which was on the side of the hill, overlooking the Hempstead Plains. Unfortunately the old home of George Pearsall, Jr., was destroyed two years before the writer's visit [Clarence Pearsall, 1919] and only a few of the smaller trees around the house remained standing, badly scorched and killed by the fire....it was in this home that Samuel and Nathaniel Pearsall, sons of George, Jr., were born, and later it was the home of Nathaniel, where his sons and daughters were born, and who later removed with him to Dutchess County, New York.
